Nebraska's largest and most historic state park, Fort Robinson was an active military post from 1874 to 1948. Crazy Horse, Walter Reed, Red Cloud, Arthur MacArthur, Dull Knife, General Crook and Doc Middleton are but a few of the colorful characters who played significant parts in carving Fort Robinson's place in western lore.

Established as a post-Civil War Indian Agency protective post, Fort Robinson survived the Indian Wars to create a long heritage that is treasured today and will be for generations to come.

History comes alive here. Through the years, Fort Robinson was the site of the tragic Cheyenne Outbreak, the nation's largest quartermaster remount depot, a field artillery testing station, an Olympic equestrian training center, the last great gathering place of the Sioux Nation, a training center for dogs used by the military and a World War II prisoner of war camp. In the 1950s, it served as a U.S. Department of Agriculture research station before becoming the jewel of the Nebraska state park system in the heart of the rugged Pine Ridge near Crawford. The park's nearly 22,000 acres blend history with natural beauty and offer exceptional outdoor recreational opportunities for every member of the family.

FUN TIMES AHEAD

There are many ways to spend a day at the fort. First on the agenda should be a horse drawn tour to get acquainted with this unique park. Enjoy a refreshing Pine Ridge morning on horseback or an open-air

Jeep ride among the buttes. When the day warms up, head for the indoor Lindeken Pool, complete with outdoor wading pool and sundeck.

Travel the Old West way on the Fort Robinson stagecoach or with a hike through the pine-clad hills. For something extra special, there are early morning hayrack breakfasts and evening steak cookouts. There's fishing, too, for trout, bass and panfish in the ponds or Soldier Creek. Stroll into history with a visit to the many historic buildings, as well as the Trailside Museum and the Fort Robinson Museum. Make a souvenir at the Activities Center, visit the Nature Center or backpack into the Soldier Creek Wilderness Area. Drive through the buffalo herd pasture or to many of the historic or recreational sites nearby: Toadstool Geologic Park and the Oglala National Grasslands, Agate Fossil Bed National Monument, Chadron State Park and more. Golf buffs can enjoy the Pine Ridge scenery at Legends Butte Golf Course near Crawford.

Fort Robinson has acquired the Fort Niobrara herd of 219 true Texas longhorns. Please check information on how to see them. Come evening, take in the rodeo games or the Post Playhouse. And a must for every visitor . . . the Chuckwagon Buffalo Stew Cookout, with its sing-along around the campfire.

Park activities operate Memorial weekend through Labor Day, with a limited fall schedule. For complete schedules, check the Post Dispatch newsletter, available at several locations around the park.

- 1887 Adobe Officers' Quarters As the fort expanded during the 1880s to become a regimental cavalry headquarters, these adobes were built facing the new parade ground established northwest of the original. Restorations depict lifestyle of officers of the period.
 - 1904 Harness Repair & 1906 Blacksmith shops The Harness Repair Shop, originally a blacksmith shop, was used by saddlers to make and repair harness, saddles, boots and other leather items. During WWII, leather boots for K-9 Dog Corps were made there. Cavalry horses, mules and later Remount Depot horses were shod at the Blacksmith Shop.
 - 1908 Veterinary Hospital Built during the last big expansion at the fort, it served the 8th (1907-10) and 12th (1910-16) Cavalry regiments. Fort Robinson was designated as one of three Quartermaster Remount depots in 1919 and eventually became the world's largest such station, operating through World War II.
 - Guardhouse & Adjutant's Office Built in 1875, these two buildings were reconstructed from written records after archeological excavation. In 1877, Sioux warrior Crazy Horse died in the Adjutant's Office after being mortally wounded at the Guardhouse.
 - Red Cloud Indian Agency & POW Camp Both located 1½ miles from the fort complex, the Red Cloud Agency was established in 1873 to issue government goods to some 13,000 Indians camped around the agency. The Sioux Expedition, consisting of 949 soldiers, arrived here in March 1874 to protect the agency from hostile Indians. In March 1943, the POW Camp was added to house German World War II prisoners. Most of them worked at the fort for a wage set by the Geneva Convention.
 - Cheyenne Outbreak Barracks One of the most tragic events in the history of the fort occurred here. In the bitter cold on January 9, 1879, a band of Northern Cheyenne, in fear of being sent back to Indian Territory in Oklahoma tried to escape the log barracks. During their daring escape, Cheyenne were killed between the parade ground and the river. Known as the Cheyenne Outbreak, this event was one of the last battles of the Indian War.
